Overview

On-time project completion has always been an indicator of project success. However, any construction project will be subjected to unpredictable circumstances that may hinder the smooth passage of construction process.

Completing the project on time is a shared goal of both owner and contractor. If the project is delayed, both parties will incur additional cost and loss of potential revenue. Delay in construction gives rise to a need of application of extension of time to provide enough time to complete a project.

This course is designed to address the pressing issues relating to the extension of time in building construction, engineering sector. It will look at the various delay analysis methods correlating to the nature of delays and information available. It will also explain the importance and key actions which should be considered whilst planning any contracts.
